(NaturalHealth365) If you are paying attention to those around you, it may have become noticeable that a good number of individuals are suffering from an exponentially growing number of inexplicable health issues. Even more problematic is that perhaps, you have noticed such declines are occurring with your family members or even within yourself. According to a recent study, many unwanted symptoms could be triggered by electromagnetic frequencies.

Unfortunately, most of these negative effects are most predominant in those aged 30 and less. But, infants and young children appear to suffer the most symptoms neurologically.

Even more alarming, is the fact that most conventionally-trained physicians cannot seem to identify any 'documented' health condition to diagnose countless patients with today who they imply suffer from 'ghost' diseases.

Exposing the disturbing TRUTH about electromagnetic frequencies and its impact on our health

This entire research project, developed by a retired healthcare professional – Catherine Frompovich, began as more and more daily consumers noticed 'unexplainable' symptoms of illness and a predominance of actually diagnosed 'dis'-eases.

And, just to be clear, electromagnetic frequencies interfere with the human body's natural resonances (Schumann Resonances) and impede a number of systematic and organ functions including:

Did you know? The liver is the most important detoxifying organ in the body. When the liver can't effectively neutralize and dispose of toxins, they accumulate in the body. Two essential nutrients for healthy liver function are milk thistle and glutathione. These two ingredients - plus much more – are now available in an advanced liver support formula.

- Sleep disturbances
- Mental decline/cognizant functioning
- Concentration issues
- Headaches
- Irritability/mood swings
- Slow healing from viral, bacterial and parasitic infections
- Involuntary twitching
- Cancerous formations

However, the dangers of EMFs are even more predominant today than ever before as we transition into higher levels of technology such as 5G cellular technology, smart home innovations, high-powered computers, endless wireless gadgets, 'smart' utility meters, and other devices that consumers can't seem to get enough of.

Because so many individuals are going undiagnosed today, exasperating conditions associated with the dangers of EMFs are often called Electromagnetic Hypersensitivity (EHS) and is sometimes called Idiopathic Environmental Intolerance (IEI).

However, the disclosures and purported results of these 'studies' seem to depend a lot on who's funding the research.

What should we know about radio frequency studies today

If the most recent studies have shown anything definitively beyond the dangers of EMFs themselves, they certainly have correlated the fact that the results highly depend upon who finances such projects and research studies.

According to researcher Dr. Henry Lai from the University of Washington, recent compilations of data concerning funding and 'facts' indicate that 70 percent of non-industry funded studies confirmed relationships between EMFs and health declines, while a mere 32 percent of industry funded studies claimed to have found any correlation between health issues and these bombardments.

Obviously, 'following the money' can tell us a lot about potential research bias. But, more importantly, if we feel that EMF pollution is harming our health, what should we do?

For starters, reduce your time spent on any device that emits these frequencies such as cell phones, wireless computers, TV's, microwaves, Bluetooth devices plus many other high electricity generating devices, in general.

If you have to use these devices, make sure that they are 'hard wired' – as much as possible. And, use a 'hard wired' telephone, as often as you can – instead of a cell phone.
